

For many Americans, affording their medicines may be more difficult than ever.

America's biopharmaceutical companies may be able to help.

You have enough to worry about right now. That's why many of America's biopharmaceutical companies are expanding their assistance programs to help more people. Assistance may be available, whether you have insurance or not. Search PhRMA's medicine assistance tool at MAT.org, where you can get connected with many of the patient assistance resources that biopharmaceutical companies offer.

Every medicine our companies develop in the lab is made with patients in mind.
